PRAIRIEVILLE, Ia., Aug. 30.—[Special.]—The great event for the second joint debate between the two candidates for Governor and a little national note in the extreme western counties outside of Allamakee County, itself, as the point to be aimed for, has arrived. Some eight counties—Clayton, Fayette, and Winneshiek, form two of the four which Peoria, other than sustain the antiprohibitionists, although, for the other seven counties in Iowa, is Democratic, a stranger audience did not, for the time being, would have dropped in such to the political gentlemen without going to the trouble of looking up to voting record. A vote equal and four-fifths of the entire vote, and an aggregate of about 5,000 voters. A goodly portion of these were Democrats or Greenbackers, similar in appearance to the members of the Grand, the Constitutional Convention, and the Democratic Convention of Northern Illinois.

[illegible]

As announced with yesterday's debate at Independence, the Prairieville business for the crowd and the arrangements were started from Dubuque, Clayton, and other points in the north. The entire transport and during the forenoon, was largely a repetition of that which left in the two others, though fewer and fewer the two conditions existed all in coming a new point. [illegible] several, two Sherman followers, and Kinne agents. The latter left on the principal question and stuck to it to the end of the speaker hour. The interest in the meeting was the impression that the Democrats were the greater friends of the whisky men, and charged the Republicans with [illegible] prohibition and [illegible] drag the subject, finding it an [illegible] to dodge. Many of the Democrats were from Dubuque, and these, and that even the prohibition Democrats, themselves did not vote for or endorse it. The [illegible] Democrats that the Republicans stood [illegible] to and sustained the results of the [illegible] and [illegible] with a non-partisanship.

Kinne [illegible] to his old [illegible] started a laugh by saying he had never known a man to be elected to the Clayton County's pages who lived in Grand, and [illegible] to repeat the story of the Clayton alleged [illegible] to and continued interest to the Big Grove election, [illegible] the one man elected after an equal number of votes to secure [illegible] committee to collect of the school fund. THE JAVANESE HORROR.

A GREAT CESSATION OF VOLCANIC ACTIVITY.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—[Special Cable.]—The mails from Batavia received tonight are of a very interesting nature, although details of the horrors of the eruption continue to exist. After the sudden subsidence of the disturbance in the Straights of Sunda the steamer named in the last dispatch from Batavia, bearing relief to the sufferers, arrived, having sailed from that port on the tenth inst. The middle of the straits was found to be filled with floating pumice stone, which in some places was more than a foot deep, and the vessel was compelled to steer slowly through it. Although without the loss of the slightest article, the fragile nature of the pumice stone rendered the steamer unfit for service. The eruption ceased to be quite visible at eight o'clock on the morning of the 27th, but it still gives forth volumes of smoke. The Java coast, which was before the eruption covered with dense forests, which grew to great dimensions on all sides, is now bare, not a tree standing, and the black, fragmentary matter carried out by the eruption accumulated into mountains, to which rocks, earth, trees, and even dead bodies were carried into the air. The principal mountain of Lampong is now covered with the ashes, and the ground and coast of Lampong is covered with dead bodies, which are in such a state of decomposition as to render it impossible to bury them. The whole of the Lampong districts are covered with ashes to the depth of from two to seven feet, and the destruction of life and property is enormous. The number of dead bodies seen floating in the straits is estimated at 20,000, and the number of human beings who have perished by the eruption will probably reach 50,000. THE UNDERWRITERS.

Second and Last Day of the Meeting of the Association of the Northwest.

Reports from State Boards—Electricity and Cyclone-Circles of Offices and Officers.

At the second and last day of the meeting of Northwestern underwriters, the association was assisted by a conference from J. F. Smith, their tradesmen engineer, to present to them the idea of the meeting of the underwriters in a Western Association Bureau of Engineers, an institution, like that to be named hereafter.

The appointment by the Committee of Seventy which had been asked to assist was the first step of the second meeting.

Chairman Underwood, for the committee, reported the names to the body of their duties.

The Committee on Schools of Instruction reported that the Union of existing bureaus, as that of a part organization, to the extent that the association agrees to the proposal.

The chair appointed Messrs. Austin, Pierce, Woods, and J. J. Wilson to prepare a minute in memory of the late Fred Gibbs, of Louisville.

Prof. A. B. Anderson of Lake College, Massachusetts, gave the committee a talk on electricity. Referring to the insufficient danger of the properties to operate, he especially mentioned overhead wires through towns and cities. The danger of fires was discussed and illustrated. The action of electricity, he said, is not certain. The danger is in the form of arcs or sparks. The danger might be lessened by the use of wires. The speaker referred to other electrical matters, and called the attention of the meeting to the recent accident to the Lake Shore express in Cleveland, and the fact that the engineer was not injured by the electricity. The speaker said that the danger was not in the wires, but in the poles. The danger might be lessened by the use of wires. The speaker referred to other electrical matters, and called the attention of the meeting to the recent accident to the Lake Shore express in Cleveland, and the fact that the engineer was not injured by the electricity. The speaker said that the danger was not in the wires, but in the poles.

At the Chairman's request, Prof. Anderson explained the action of lightning on electrical apparatus.

A. J. Wilson spoke about the meeting adopting a resolution to have the Underwriters' Laboratories, of Chicago, test the electrical apparatus.
